Practice Areas

Litigation
Real Estate Transactions and Litigation

Patrick is an associate practicing in the Litigation and Real Estate Sections of Ray Quinney & Nebeker.

Before joining Ray Quinney, he worked in public policy in Washington, D.C. and Utah. In D.C., Patrick served as a political appointee at the U.S. Department of Labor, where he helped develop and shepherd new rules and proposals through the regulatory process. He also worked closely with the Secretary of Labor on issues related to the American economy. After leaving D.C., Patrick returned home to Utah to join Salt Lake County as its Director of Government Relations. In that role, he helped Salt Lake County achieve meaningful progress on a variety of policy areas, including land use, economic development, and housing and homelessness.

Patrick is a graduate of Stanford Law School where he was a member of the Stanford Law Review. During law school, Patrick was an active member of the Environmental Law Society and contributed to the report Government by Algorithm: Artificial Intelligence in Federal Administrative Agencies, a report commissioned by the Administrative Conference of the United States.
