Legal problems arising out of family disputes can be confusing and fraught with emotional issues. They are also difficult to manage without a perceptive lawyer who employs tactful yet vigorous representation. The attorneys in Ray Quinney & Nebeker's family law group are personable, caring, and attentive. Their goal is to work with clients to understand the unique problems each situation brings. The family law group works tirelessly to understand and address the client's situation, goals, and needs.

The family law group at Ray Quinney and Nebeker also has unmatched knowledge and skill to assist clients who face family-related issues. The attorneys are skilled at negotiating settlements and when settlement is not possible, trained and practiced at litigating cases. The group also draws on the expertise of other lawyers and practice groups at Ray Quinney & Nebeker to make sure that their advice and advocacy is broadly sound.

Ray Quinney & Nebeker's family law group seeks to solve family law issues in the best way possible for each case. Thus, the attorneys look to alternatives to litigation to solve problems. When possible, the attorneys use Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR). ADR methods include negotiation, mediation, the "collaborative process," and arbitration. ADR often allows clients to resolve their legal problems in a more timely and efficient manner with less emotional stress.
